Wendy has over 30 years of experience as a health professional (clinical, education, and research), twenty-five of those years in mental health. Areas of specific interest and passion for Wendy include professional supervision, professional boundaries, professional identity, links between childhood trauma and mental illness, and workplace bullying.

Wendy has over 20 years of experience as a psychodrama trainee – lifelong learning. She is committed to using experiential learning in the work she does with individuals and groups. Wendy maintains a full diary of workshops throughout Australia and London UK and consistently receives feedback on her passion, knowledge, and creativity as a presenter and facilitator.

Wendy is continually integrating learning and insights she gains from the work she does within professional boundaries. She has developed internet training tools and education packages for individuals/organisations and delivers webinars for organisations.

With the assistance of six podcast episodes titled 'Professional Boundaries', Wendy is exploring and guiding listeners on their

COLLEEN REID

Most of my professional nursing career was spent in adult mental health in public and private mental health hospitals and community settings. I managed a mental health special care unit for many years. The last five years of my professional life was spent teaching in the Diploma of Nursing TAFE.

I have now retired and like many of my fellow nurses - there came a time when it was right to do so. So now there is a little more time to reflect and read many of those articles that sat waiting for the elusive spare time.

There have been many changes in our practice since I commenced training in 1974 (psychiatric then general and obstetrics) and our narrative about who we are and what we do has often been revised.

Whether in my clinical roles, in hospital or community settings or in my teaching roles our story and how this interacts with clinical practice has been both fascinating and frustrating. And fabulous and funny. Want to hear a good story?...ask a nurse."
